Here's Happiness for All the Years to Come

A child with musical talent should be given every possible encouragement. Even those children who show no marked love of music should be given the opportunity to play some sort of musical instrument.

Why? The cultivation of the musical art will stand your child in good stead in the years to come. It is an accomplishment that none can take away.

It will be the source of great happiness in the child's mature years. And the ability to play well will prove to be the open sesame to countless friendships that will give comfort and pleasure throughout life.
